

NOTED CASES TO BE TRIED

Grand Jury Assembles at Washington After the Summer Recess.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—Much interest attaches to a number of cases which will be considered during the fall term of the District courts and the grand jury, which assembled today after the summer recess. The most important of the cases are: The case of the late Senator John A. Logan, who was indicted for conspiracy to defraud the government of the proceeds of the sale of the late Senator's property; the case of the late Senator John A. Logan, who was indicted for conspiracy to defraud the government of the proceeds of the sale of the late Senator's property; the case of the late Senator John A. Logan, who was indicted for conspiracy to defraud the government of the proceeds of the sale of the late Senator's property.

The trial of Miss Elizabeth Flagg, the young woman whose fatal shooting of a colored boy while despoiling her fruit trees created a sensation some weeks ago, will be considered by the grand jury. Miss Flagg is now out on $10,000 bail.

The cases of Benjamin H. Milken, indicted for house breaking and attempting assault; Captain Henry W. Hovgate, ex-disturbing officer of the signal service, whose sentence of eight years for forgery and embezzlement will be appealed; Cesar C. Moreno, indicted for libeling Baron Fata, the Italian ambassador, a number of alleged Chinese "highlanders," charged with conspiracy against other Chinese, and a test case over the legality of the Edmunds anti-polygamy and adultery act as applicable to the District of Columbia, will also be heard.

PRESS COMMENT ON THE YACHT RACE

London Papers Dwell Upon the Crowding of the Course by Excursion Steamers.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—The Pall Mall Gazette, in its comments on the international yacht race, says: "We fear there is no American's cup this year for Lord Darnley. The better boat won as it is likely to win every time. The chief defect of Valkyrie, to which we have on several occasions alluded, is the fact she makes going through the water. The conditions of the first match, therefore, were much against her. With a calm surface she may do better, but in stronger winds she is not likely to do so well."

In another place the Pall Mall Gazette says that the excursion steamers following the yachts behaved even more disgracefully than usual, but that there is no suggestion that they hampered one of the boats more than the other.

"Perhaps the most disappointing feature of Valkyrie's defeat," adds the Gazette, "is the Defender's gain on the broad reach home, when there was no rough water."

All the London papers dwell upon the crowding of the course by excursion steamers.

The request was granted and the papers will remain in the secretary's possession until Senator Manderson is heard from.

HARDIE LEFT THE HALL

English Labor Leader Addresses a Meeting of Chicago Ministers.

HAD TO ABANDON THE FLOOR

Ecology of the Haymarket Anarchists

Bailed $500 a Storm of Ministerial Disapproval That the Speaker Left the Meeting in a Hall.

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—Kier Hardie, the English labor leader, sadly disturbed the usually sedate weekly meeting of the Methodist clergymen today by a red hot socialist speech, and was greeted with a storm of ministerial disapproval that he was compelled to abandon the floor.

Hardie had been invited to address the Chicago anarchists, and with several local socialists, attended the meeting.

The Englishman proceeded to air his views, loudly applauded by his friends, and finally intemperately denounced the execution of the Chicago anarchists, and endeavored them as pious in the new religion. The storm which greeted the statement almost carried Hardie off his feet. A half dozen sentinels expressed, and the speaker was compelled to sit down.

The ministers then proceeded with a scolding greeting, accompanied by the movement of scarlet faces in unison with open hands, given in silence, and in the dim, curtained light of the council chamber, defies adequate description by the pen.

And then the newcomer returned the salutes separately, beginning at the left hand side, round the square of his colleagues, subordinates and superiors, and one more candidate for the vicarage was effaced, for nobody knew upon whom the choice of the sultan had fallen. Many names were whispered round, but as their owners entered the circle of greeting their chances were seen to be extinguished. One after another they followed on, till by a process of reduction it became a question of only two or three, all the rest of Turkey's statesmen and all her greatest pashas having already trodden the carpet and taken their seats of expectation. Then from the windows could be seen a small procession winding up the ascent. In front were two horsemen, he on the left a little man well known to all the watchers in the chamber, and on the right the Sheikh ul Islam, shining in the sunlight with his robes of pure white and gold.

In the passing of a breath the name of Ketchik Said fluttered round the room, and a few moments later the new grand vizier, who had already thrived gone through the same ceremony, was standing in the center of the ministerial group. There he drew from his breast a green silk bag, and extracting from it the imperial hat he pressed the parchment to his lips and forehead. The dark bearded sheikh repeated this homage to the words of his imperial master, and the hat was handed to the evrak mudiri, or keeper of the archives, who read aloud that his imperial majesty the sultan, knowing the devotion, well proved, of Said Pasha, entrusted to him the duties of grand vizier, and that, having full confidence in the piety of the Sheikh ul Islam, he prolonged his term of office, being anxious in all things for the best welfare of his people, and might Almighty God bless their efforts toward that end. Then again a wave of sweeping hands and bending heads went round, and the sheikh, in full, deep tones, offered up a prayer for the sultan and the empire. In a moment the council chamber was transformed into a holy place, and the politicians, pashas and scribes, with upturned palms, seemed to have forgotten for a space the world and its vanities. It would be hard to imagine anything more striking than this prayer, amid such surroundings and on such an occasion.

With it terminated the investiture. The new grand vizier adjourned to his room with his ministry for coffee and a purfurnery cabinet council, and later on the old and new viziers and ministers repaired to Yildiz to pay their first respects to their lord. Meanwhile another hat had arrived, changing the occupant of the western wing of the porte, for Said Pasha, who has been minister for foreign affairs for nine years, was bidden to vacate his familiar chair in favor of Turkish Pasha—Constantinople Letter.

THE GRAND VIZIER.

HOW HE IS SELECTED BY THE SULTAN AND INSTALLED.

One of the Most Striking Scenes Connected With the Turkish Court—No One Knows Who Is to Be Named Until the Last Moment—An Impressive Prayer.

The ceremony of "naming" the new grand vizier is one of the most impressive sights imaginable, and as it has seldom if ever been described an attempt to convey some idea of it may not be without interest. It was toward 4 o'clock on Saturday afternoon that the servants commenced to carry out from Djavad Pasha's rooms at the sublime porte his books, papers, pens and other private paraphernalia. This was the first intimation given to the world that the grand vizier had fallen. Shortly afterward troops filed up the hill and lined both sides of the road from the landing stage at Sirizidy to the doors of the palace. The news spread like fire under a wind, and by 5 o'clock all preparations were completed for the reception of the new occupant of the principal office in the empire. In the great council chamber the scene was unique in its quiet dignity. The room was crowded with all the high officials present and past, and though an hour or two previously none there had even guessed what was about to happen each one took his place silently and regularly, without confusion or mistake, awaiting the advent of the still unknown chief.

At the head of the hall a small vacant space was left, around which grouped the present ministers and those who had previously held portfolios. As each came in he paced slowly up the carpet with one short salute. As soon as he reached the end all present returned the teneba's with a sweep of the hand to the ground, breast and forehead. This rhythmic greeting, accompanied by the movement of scarlet faces in unison with open hands, given in silence, and in the dim, curtained light of the council chamber, defies adequate description by the pen.

And then the newcomer returned the salutes separately, beginning at the left hand side, round the square of his colleagues, subordinates and superiors, and one more candidate for the vicarage was effaced, for nobody knew upon whom the choice of the sultan had fallen. Many names were whispered round, but as their owners entered the circle of greeting their chances were seen to be extinguished. One after another they followed on, till by a process of reduction it became a question of only two or three, all the rest of Turkey's statesmen and all her greatest pashas having already trodden the carpet and taken their seats of expectation.
